Interview with Kristen Faulk

12 questions and Kristen's responses

1. How would you describe yourself and your personality to someone meeting you for the first time?

I am a Christ-follower. I am genuine, simple, and detail-oriented. I love my family, music, and learning.

2. Where did you grow up, and what are some important memories or experiences from your childhood?

I grew up in several different places. My roots are in Louisiana, but we also spent time in Colorado, Costa Rica, and the Dominican Republic. Some important memories from my childhood are: spending time with family out in the country, fishing, playing outside, and singing with my sisters.

3. What experiences or people have had the greatest influence on the person you are today?

I would say that my family has had the greatest influence on the person that I am today. My parents raised me to be hard-working, respectful, and honest. My sisters have shaped me and challenged me to become a better person through our various experiences in life. They've taught me to be quick to love and slow to judge.

4. What are you most passionate about in life, and why is it important to you?

I am most passionate about my faith. It is important to me because it is what has kept me grounded and sustained through some of life's most difficult trials. It is what drives and influences every other aspect of my life.

5. What are your favorite hobbies or activities, and how did you become interested in them?

Playing music is one of my favorite hobbies. I don't remember when I became interested in music, I was just raised with music and hymns always being sung around me. My parents paid for me to have lessons for piano, guitar, and violin growing up. I learned to sing harmony just by hearing everyone at our small country church sing in 4-part harmony at every service. I have so many memories from my childhood that are tied to music, and worship has always been a vital part of my Christian walk.

Another hobby of mine is reading. I love to read many different genres of books. When I was younger I enjoyed being able to read fiction and mystery books and feel like I was part of the story. As I've gotten older, I enjoy reading books that stretch my mind or challenge my way of thinking. I enjoy reading books about theology and the Christian walk. I love to read books by old church fathers to see the heritage of faith and how the early church leaders wrestled with some important theological concepts. I also enjoy reading memoirs by people that I admire or look up to.

6. What is an accomplishment or achievement in your life that you are especially proud of?

I am proud of myself for dedicating 1 year to the Training Program at my church in Dallas. It was a theological training program for 2 semesters, and I am proud that I was able to finish it and learn a lot alongside a cohort of women who challenged my faith and made it stronger in the end.

7. What is one significant challenge you have faced, and what did you learn from that experience?

The most significant challenge that I have faced, and continue to face, is dealing with chronic health conditions. Being unable to consistently understand my body and why it lets me down sometimes has been a challenge to my health, but also my faith. I have learned a lot from this experience, and it has caused me to rely on my faith more heavily. It has also taught me the things in life that are most valuable are faith, the people around you, and the experiences and time that you spend investing in and building up people in your circle.

8. What values or principles are most important to you when making decisions in life?

I would say the values that drive my decision-making in life are my faith and my desire to steward all resources that God has given me faithfully. I tend to weigh what impact my decisions will have on the people around me, and if that decision will draw them closer to Christ or further away. I want to make decisions in life that honor Christ and allow the people in my life to see Him and His goodness rather than making decisions just by what's most convenient or financially lucrative.

9. What goals are you currently working toward, either personally or professionally?

Personally, I am working toward a goal of learning more about the role of the Holy Spirit in my Christian walk. I want to gain more knowledge and allow myself to experience the power of the Holy Spirit without being timid about it or feeling trepidacious about asking for the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Professionally, I am working to increase my knowledge of Special Education processes so that I can learn how to advocate for parents of Special Education students and maybe eventually be a Special Education and Section 504 advocate.

10. When you think about your future, what do you hope your life will look like in the next five to ten years?

In the next 5 years, I hope to be married with kids. I hope that I will continue to grow as a person in my faith. I hope to be challenged by the people around me to grow to be more loving, more faithful, more kind, and more patient. I hope to be a better person, a better partner, and a better Christ-follower. I also hope that my health would continue to become more manageable, and that I would be more attune to my body in order to better control symptoms and manage expectations when it comes to what my body is and isn't able to do.

11. What is something interesting or unique about you that people might not immediately know?

One interesting thing about me is that I speak Spanish and taught high school Spanish for 15 years.

12. If people visiting a website about your life could remember only one thing about you, what would you want them to remember?

I would want them to remember that while I'm not perfect, it was the grace of God that sustained me in life's hardest seasons, and He gets all the glory for anything I was able to accomplish and every blessing that I received.

Kristen Faulk: A Life Grounded in Faith, Family, and Growth

Formal biography for the About page

Kristen Faulk describes herself as a Christ-follower who values genuineness, simplicity, and attention to detail. Faith and family have played central roles throughout her life, shaping both the person she has become and the way she approaches her future.

Kristen's childhood was shaped by experiences in several different places. Although her roots are in Louisiana, she also spent time in Colorado, Costa Rica, and the Dominican Republic. Some of her most meaningful childhood memories are simple ones: spending time with family in the country, fishing, playing outside, and singing with her sisters. Her parents taught her the importance of hard work, respect, and honesty, while her sisters challenged her to grow and taught her to be quick to love and slow to judge.

Music has been part of Kristen's life for as long as she can remember. She grew up surrounded by music and hymns and received lessons in piano, guitar, and violin. At her small country church, she learned to sing harmony simply by listening to the congregation sing in four-part harmony. These experiences created a lasting connection between music, worship, family, and her Christian faith.

Reading is another important part of Kristen's life. As a child, she enjoyed fiction and mystery because books allowed her to become immersed in different stories. As an adult, her interests have expanded to theology, Christian living, writings from early church leaders, and memoirs by people she admires. She particularly appreciates books that challenge her thinking and deepen her understanding.

One accomplishment Kristen is especially proud of is completing a one-year theological Training Program at her church in Dallas. During two semesters of study, she learned alongside a cohort of women who challenged her and ultimately helped strengthen her faith.

Professionally, Kristen has spent many years in education. She speaks Spanish and taught high school Spanish for 15 years. She is now working to expand her knowledge of Special Education processes with the possibility of eventually advocating for parents of Special Education and Section 504 students.

Kristen's faith has also sustained her through difficult seasons. Her experiences have strengthened her appreciation for faith, relationships, and the importance of investing time in others. When making major decisions, she considers not only what may benefit her personally, but also how her choices affect the people around her and whether those choices reflect her Christian values.

Looking toward the future, Kristen hopes to continue growing in her faith and understanding of the Holy Spirit. Within the next five to ten years, she hopes to be married with children and to continue becoming more loving, faithful, kind, and patient. Above all, Kristen wants her life to communicate one central message: she credits the grace of God with sustaining her through difficult seasons and gives God the glory for her accomplishments and blessings.
